INTRODUCTION

The PRC Bibliography

As a bibliography the Index is heavily indebted to an already existing work, namely, the University of Texas Population Research Center's (PRC) International Population Census Bibliography, Vol. 1-7 (Austin: Bureau of Business Research, The University of Texas, 1965-1968). This latter Bibliography was an enormous achievement. Not only did it bring together, for the first time, the entire known universe of world population census publications, it also accomplished this task according to a basic format upon which it would be difficult to improve. One can, of course, begin to unpack the information contained in the PRC listings, as Donovan and Blake have done for certain 1960 vintage European census publications.<sup>1</sup> But the regional organization of the PRC Bibliography, combined with its perspicuous and flexible numbering system, makes it an ideal tool for students and librarians working in the area of population censuses.

The regional organization of the PRC Bibliography involves its being divided into seven volumes as follows:

- Volume 1: Latin America and the Caribbean
- Volume 2: Africa
- Volume 3: Oceania
- Volume 4: North America
- Volume 5: Asia
- Volume 6: Europe
- Volume 7: Supplement 1968

The Supplement provides additional listings for the countries in each of the six regions.

The numbering system involves assigning to each title or to each bibliographically distinct unit of a title (e.g., multiple volumes in a series or within the same publications) a two-part number made up of the calendar year in which the census in question was taken followed by a simple sequential number. An example are the following items in the 1966 Lesotho census:

- Bureau of Statistics.
1966 population census report. Maseru, Bureau of Statistics [1969]-1971. In 2 v.
- [1966.1] Volume I. Administrative, methodological and financial report. Census tables. [1969] 216 p., map, specimen forms.
- [1966.2] Volume II. Village lists, village population and E. A. population densities. 1971. [8], 149 p.

Since the listings are grouped by country within the regional sections of the Bibliography, a given item is uniquely identified by quoting the name of the country followed by the PRC number, e.g., Lesotho [1966.1].

Use of the Reel Index

These PRC numbers have been simply taken over in the microfilm collection and Reel Index and serve, along with the name of the country, as the identifying targets for each item on the film. In addition, the inclusive numbers on a given reel appear in the title block and on the reel box label along with the name of the census project as a whole, the name of the region, the country name, and the reel number. A sample title block reads:

INTERNATIONAL POPULATION CENSUS PUBLICATIONS

Region: Europe

Country: France

Census year(s): 1946

Reel 1 of 4

Nos. 1946.1 thru 1946.5

The box labels record the same information in a slightly different format. It should be noted that there are usually different reel sequences for different census years for a given country. Thus the United States in the 1945-1967 period had two population censuses, one in 1950 and one in 1960. In the microfilm edition there is a 1950 reel 1-18 sequence and a separate 1960 reel 1-31 sequence. Some countries do, however, have publications from more than one census year on the same reel and in several cases publications for two or more countries appear on the same reel. In other words, in using the Reel Index to locate items and reels of film, the user should note the census year(s) in question as well as the name of the country and the number of the reel.

Extension of the PRC Bibliography Numbering System

Mere numbers, of course, are not enough for the researcher, who also needs full bibliographic identification on each item. The PRC Bibliography provides excellent bibliographic listings for the publications it includes. In fact, it was originally expected that the microfilm collection would be accompanied by a copy of the relevant volume(s) of the PRC Bibliography supplemented by a reel location index which would locate the various items in the film collection by simply pairing the PRC numbers with their appropriate reel numbers. Several factors, however, caused a change in this original plan.

In the first place there was the problem of how to identify by number the listings in the PRC Supplement, since PRC had not itself assigned numbers to this material. This first problem had a natural solution, namely, to annotate the Supplement with PRC-compatible numbers. On a country by country basis the items in the Supplement were supplied with PRC-compatible numbers which either serially continued the sequence established by PRC or interfiled into it. In all cases these numbers were given in square brackets to indicate clearly that they were assigned by us rather than PRC. An example of serially continuing numbers is Mexico, where the last number assigned by PRC to the 1960 census is 1960.22, with the Supplement containing 18 additional items. These additional 1960 items were thus numbered as [1960.23] - [1960.40].

In some cases it was decided to interfile given items within the PRC sequence rather than tag them on at the end in serial order. Such items were therefore assigned PRC-compatible interfile numbers. Examples are found in the 1961 Scotland census in the County

Reports series of publications. PRC's Europe volume had definitely identified only one of these, using the number 1961.6 for it. It then employed 1961.7 as a sort of group listing for reports 2-35 which had not yet been published, and continued on with bibliographically different items through the number 1961.18. The Supplement subsequently added the listings for reports 2-35. Rather than begin these additional reports with [1961.19], the interfile numbers [1961.7-1] - [1961.7-33] were assigned to Reports 3-35, with [1961.7] being assigned to Report no. 2; ([1961.7] was put in square brackets because its bibliographic content was different from PRC's own indeterminate 1961.7.)

It was not always possible to preserve bibliographic and serial integrity with interfile numbers; the chief examples here are Mexico and England and Wales. But this problem is handled by adding cross references in the text of the Reel Index. For example, there is a note in parentheses after Mexico 1960.18 which tells the user that the series of which 1960.18 is the last item with a PRC number is continued by PRC-compatible numbers [1960.23] - [1960.40]. With these sorts of cross references a user will always be able to determine quickly and conveniently the total make-up of a particular bibliographic unit.

In addition to the items listed in the Supplement, PRC-compatible numbers and, in particular, interfile numbers have been assigned where a PRC entry supplied by us, e.g., the [1961.7] Scotland item already mentioned. The PRC number for such entries is listed where necessary with a reference ahead to the superseding number(s). These superseding numbers very often arise from our having bibliographically "unpacked" some entries a bit more than PRC. Thus PRC's France 1960.1-2 and 1960.103 have become [1960.102-1] - [1960.102-12] and [1960.103-1] - [1960.103-9]. Other reasons for superseding numbers will be obvious from the explanations supplied in the Reel Index in the contexts in the contexts in which they occur.

Bibliographic Extension of the PRC Bibliography

The above system for extending the PRC numbering system had already begun to strain the practicality of relying on the printed PRC Bibliography as the bibliographic Back-up to a numbers-only Reel Index (with minimum additional information supplied to indicate whether PRC-compatible numbers were identifying superseding, "unpacked," or Supplement entries). With such an indexing system a researcher might be inconvenienced by having to go constantly from a separate number-only index to one of the six regional volumes and then to the Supplement. But what finally tipped the balance in favor of the present, single, Bibliography / Reel Index was the number of additional items that were added to the microfilm project which were neither in one of PRC's original regional volumes nor in the Supplement. There were, for example, 105 items added in the case of France, 89 in the case of England and Wales, 81 for Brazil, 24 for Colombia, 8 for Sweden, 19 for Scotland, 11 for Denmark, and so on. In a number of cases, e.g., Denmark 1965, whole censuses not listed in PRC's volumes, but comprehended by the stated limits of the microfilm collection, i.e., population censuses taken in the years 1945-1967, were included in the microfilm collection.

Since these items could not simply be assigned numbers without also being given bibliographic descriptions, it was decided to re-issue, in a revised and consolidated form, those parts of the PRC Bibliography that listed 1945-1967 censuses, together with all of the additions. In one or two instances--most notably for Togo--the bibliographic and numerical listing provided in the PRC Bibliography was actually re-shuffled and/or revised with the discovery of complete bibliographic information in order to provide an accurate description of a volume series. The additions were also assigned PRC-compatible numbers and have been bibliographically described in the present Reel Index according to the excellent format already established by PRC.

A word should be said about the types of additions that were made. Very few could be properly said to have been "missed" by PRC. Indeed the exhaustiveness of PRC's original effort was something that only one who has been involved in the time-consuming and often frustrating pursuit after foreign government documents could adequately appreciate. The greatest bulk of additions are simply items that were published after PRC went to press with its Supplement in 1967-68. Most of the remaining additions are materials of which PRC may well have been aware but which it did not list because the items were more involved with census methodology than with actual census statistics. Examples are France [1954.192] and [1962.107] - [1962.113]. PRC does list some methodological items within its main sequence but it makes no pretense to being comprehensive for this class of material.<sup>2</sup> Nor do we, and we simply added those methodologically oriented items where we felt that they might be of immediate use to the researcher. Another small class of additions are brief summary presentations of preliminary or provisional figures for a given census, e.g., Northern Ireland [1950.0] and [1950.0-1]. Such items are also added for their methodological and summary value and not because they contain direct information not contained in the final reports. It does sometimes happen that the preliminary reports are not effectively superseded by final reports, but PRC was well aware of this and included the preliminary reports in such cases.

Our own additions were occasionally made on the basis of bibliographic listings, e.g., Donovan and Blake were useful for the 1962 French census. But most often it was a case of finding the items on shelves in libraries or getting the information from the original issuing statistical office in question. The latter source, along with Doreen Goyer, the librarian at PRC, have also been helpful in allowing us to annotate with a fair degree of certitude certain announced items as "Not yet published" or "Never published."

In addition to the titles being added to the microfilm collection from the PRC Supplement a great deal of new material is being added to Africa and, to a lesser extent, Asia. These additions fall under two distinct headings. The first, official census publications, have been routinely added for all countries as they are discovered. The 1966 census of Iran is an example. India, too, was completed bibliographically with the addition of certain volumes not originally listed in the Supplement, but more especially through detailing and/or revising the listings already given in the PRC Bibliography. It was decided, however, that the village surveys and monographs for India were outside the scope of the microfilm collection and this voluminous subset of the 1951 and 1961 Indian censuses was, therefore, systematically excluded.

Demographic studies and other population surveys (the second group of additions to the Africa and Asia sections of the collection) were included only for the countries which lacked formal and/or regular population censuses. Although many of the demographic studies included in the collection were originally listed in the "Demographic Surveys" or “Other Relevant Publications” sections by PRC, a substantial quantity have been added using the resources of the United Nations Library in New York and the Bureau of the Census Library (formerly the Social and Economic Statistics Administration Library) in Suitland, Maryland. Several of these discoveries have begun chain reactions, since very often a book was designated either in the title or introduction as being part of a series. “Preliminary”, “definitive results”, or words to that effect have uncovered a trove of census publications not listed in PRC. In some cases, e.g., Algeria 1966, it was decided to list for the sake of bibliographic completeness an entire census series, even though many volumes were not yet published or available for microfilming. It is hoped, then, that through the sum of the listings in the PRC Bibliography and these additions, a profile of the population counts can be obtained.

And finally, the listings in this volume are in modified catalog form. What this means is that main entries have been transcribed without attempting to regularize in every case--and in some cases, added entries have been supplied as sub-main entries. This procedure was deemed acceptable in a guide such as this where an effort would be made to capture the maximum information about an item without resorting to the sort of annotations which would be appropriate only on a catalog card. Formal cataloging for the collection, available with subject tracings, has been made available and does, of course, rigidly adhere to the accepted rules for regularizing corporate main entries, series entries, etc.

Acknowledgements

Many libraries and librarians generously committed resources and time to the accomplishing of the filming. We sincerely thank them all. Special mention, however, is due to Dorothy Kaufman (now retired) and her staff at the Bureau of the Census Library in Suitland, Maryland. Her library has superb collections of the material. Similarly endowed with books but especially blessed with comprehensive bibliographic knowledge is Doreen Goyer of the Population Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin. She frequently came up with additions to the collection and clarifications in the listings which we would have otherwise have missed. Also helpful at critical points was June Gow, Documents Librarian at the University of California, Berkeley. A final note of thanks is due Robert Balay, Head of the Reference Department at the Yale University Sterling Memorial Library. Microfilming the censuses was his suggestion, and came from large experience which taught him that such a project might relieve him and the rest of his tribe of at least one reader service nightmare. We hope that many future inquirers after census publications will be greeted by the stern admonition: “Get thee to the microfilm reading room ! ”
